DIRECT ROUTE TO THE BEACH VIA HYPERION BOULEVARD APPROVED

Combined Improvement Association of Santa Monica Highway Meets at Hollywood and Endorses Projected Thoroughfare

FROM BRAND TO THE PACIFIC COAST

To Extend Hyperion to Sanborn Junction, Connecting There With Santa Monica Thoroughfare With a Maximum Grade of Three Per Cent

At a meeting of the combined improvement associations of Santa Monica boulevard, held last night in Cole hall, Hollywood, cordial endorsement was given the plan to give Glendale a direct route to the beaches by utilizing Hyperion boulevard to connect Glendale boulevard, which is an extension of Brand, with Santa Monica boulevard at Sanborn Junction. The endorsement was given after a map of the proposed extension had been explained to the organization by A. J. Barnes of Hollywood, who is conducting the campaign for the route. The proposed extension has already received the endorsement of the Glendale chamber of commerce, according to Mr. Barnes.

It is proposed to extend Hyperion boulevard to Sanborn Junction where it will connect with Santa Monica boulevard. This will give Glendale a direct route to the beach towns. The entire boulevard will offer a grade of from one and a half to three percent. The crossing at Sunset boulevard will be made by viaduct.

According to Mr. Barnes the proposition has also been endorsed by the Los Angeles Planning Commission and will receive the same action from the county supervisors.

The improvement will be financed by a local property assessment along the proposed highway extension. A district will be formed in the area to be improved and an assessment levied. It is also expected that the county supervisors will assist in the financing.

Mr. Barnes said last night that the movement to open this direct route to the beaches is the result of the trend of Los Angeles to grow west. The business life of the city is looking to the western section and, according to Mr. Barnes, this proposed highway extension will give Glendalians and residents of the San Fernando Valley a direct route to the business centers of Los Angeles as well as to the resorts.

One of the big factors that is expected to contribute to the success of the project is the easy grade over the entire route. This will appeal to Glendalians in particular as the present routes to Los Angeles and the beaches are made over severe grades.

The fusion of the proposed highway connection will be made with Glendale boulevard at the Ivanhoe power house where Hyperion boulevard branches from it.

That the proposed extension is not just a dream is evidenced by the residents of a section north of Sanborn Junction. These property owners have already started widening and paving Hyperion boulevard in anticipation of the proposed improvements.

The endorsement of the combined improvement associations along Santa Monica boulevard from Sanborn Junction to the sea was voted last night and after this action representatives of the various associations spoke and extended the cooperation of their organization in campaign to secure this route.

C. OF C. MEMBERS ASKED TO WORK WITH IT

President Smith Calls for Co-operation of All the Members This Year

The following communication has been sent to the members of the chamber of commerce by President Jesse Smith:

"We are beginning a new year, which, I am confident, holds unlimited opportunities and prosperity for us all—a year so chuck full of big things for Glendale that we will all need to work in the closest harmony and deliver our most sincere co-operation in order that we may accomplish the program we have in hand and in mind for this year.

"We need your individual support, your good will, your interest and enthusiasm. We need your substantial support, because to operate a chamber of commerce successfully—to make the chamber of commerce a dignified and representative body worthy of representing as great a community and as progressive a city as ours, it takes money, and plenty of it, and I, personally, assure you that the board of directors, all representative business men, will guarantee you that you shall receive value for your membership in many, many ways.

"If you have not paid your dues to date, won't you please do it now, while it is in your mind? This minute, make out your check and get in good standing on the membership roll; we must realize a fund now to help carry on for Glendale.

"We are counting on you, my friend, as a citizen keenly interested in your community, and proud of its reputation.

"Let us intrench for the future. Come in and see us. Our records are yours, and I will be pleased to go over any matters regarding the chamber with you, as will our secretaries or any member of our board of directors. Let us all pull together and make our chamber of commerce worthy of Glendale.

"Get your neighbors and friends interested. Let us boost and build in every way we can.

"Glendale has a wonderful start for 1923. New Year's day we won first prize at Pasadena with our float. Already over $1,000,000 in building permits have been issued, or are in sight. The chamber has several good possibilities to bring new manufacturing industries to Glendale this year. Are you not proud to be a member of an organization that is helping to do such big things?

"Come on, comrades. Carry on! Let's make 1923 such a record-breaker that all Southern California will marvel over our achievements. We need you, heart and soul, in our work. We must have your help. Do not deny us this encouragement. Can we count on YOU?"

THIS TURK GOT WORSE AND WORSE

Gobble, gobble.

A fine big turkey strutted proudly into the yard of 613 North Louise street, and proceeded to devour everything in sight that looked inviting.

The owner of the home, whose name cannot be learned, liked the looks of the turkey, but took exception to having his flowers ruined. He locked the turk up and reported the matter to the police.

A strange thing about this turk is that he refuses to leave the home, to which he has taken quite a fancy.

Roast turkey looks mighty good to this home owner, but he will glady return the turkey to its owner if it is correctly identified.

Because of the fact that some fifteen cadidates are seeking admission to the Order of the Temple in Glendale Commandery, and the further fact that the work is put on singly, there will be a special commandery meeting for a six o'clock dinner to be followed by temple work next Saturday night.

There was an excellent attendance at the meeting of the Glendale Commandery, Knights Templar, Monday night, when Paul Schrader of Burbank was inducted into the order of the temple. A decision was reached to give the templar ball early in March. This is the big social event of the year in commandery circles and maids and matrons will do well to be preparing their gowns. ROUNDTABLE PROVES HIT OF THE YEAR

Meeting of Scout Troop No. 2 Is Attended by 25 Leaders and Guests

MAJ. WYMAN SPEAKS

D. W. Pollard, Special Regional Representative Introduced by Chandler

The meeting Friday evening of the Troop Leaders' Roundtable held at the cabin of Glendale Troop 2, in the Verdugo Woodlands, lived up to all expectations. Nearly 25 of the Scout leaders were present. Under the direction of Scoutmaster Benjamin Robison and his son H. B. Robison, who is assistant scoutmaster, a model troop meeting was conducted. The meeting was divided into four periods as follows: First period, inspection; second period, business session; third period, recreational, games; fourth period, instruction. In this period Major C. L. Wyman, former lieutenant colonel, signal corps, U. S. army, gave a very vivid and interesting portrayal of the value of signaling in both peace and war times. Eagle Scout Dallas Kalbaugh played several selections on the zylophone, accompanied by Scout Arthur Barton on the saxaphone, and Scout Horace Brown on the violin.

D. W. Pollard, the special representative of the Twelfth Regional committee of the National council, By Scouts of America, was introduced by Charles L. Chandler, the new scout commissioner. Mr. Pollard has been invited by the executive board of the Verdugo hills district council to direct a district-wide campaign of publicity and education along boy scout channels.

Scout Executive Harold Benner told briefly of the coming visit to the Pacific coast of the Chief Scout Executive of the Boy Scouts of America, James E. West. Mr. West will be in Los Angeles February 1 to 4. He also spoke of the troop achievement contest and of the 13th anniversary of the Boy Scout movement which will be celebrated nationally during the week of February 8 to 14.

A committee consisting of Frank C. Ayars, Glendale; C. W. Angier, La Crescenta, and L. S. Percy, Tujunga, was appointed by Chief Councilor M. E. Hill to meet with a similar committee consisting of council members to work out plans and details for the local observation and celebration of anniversary week.

"Eats and plenty of them" seemed to be a very fitting slogan for the later part of the evening. Hot buns, weiners, doughnuts, coffee, and cocoa were served to the leaders and scouts present by Mrs. Benjamin Robison, Mrs. Charles L. Chandler, Mrs. Clarence Kalbaugh, Mrs. Walter H. Packard and Mrs. C. L. Wyman.

COMMUNITY SERVICE PLANS FOR PAGEANT ARE APPROVED BY THE EXECUTIVE BOARD

Appointment of a Local Executive for Work Here Is Considered From Many Angles by Supporters of the Development in This City for Future

KARR REPORTS MUCH PROGRESS ON DINNER

"The Sign of the Cross" Is Proposed for Production at Sparr Heights by Arrangement With the Subdividers; Manuscript to Be Read First

The regular weekly luncheon meeting of the executive board of Glendale Community Service was held Monday noon at the Broadway Inn, with V. M. Hollister presiding. The members present passed favorably on the project of the great outdoor play, request for which was first presented to them by the Community Service Players. Plans for the production of "The Sign of the Cross," in the natural setting of the foothills, will be taken up in detail with Mr. Walters of the Sparr Heights organization. Before final acceptance of the proposition the executive committee of Glendale Community Service will read the manuscript of the play.

The question of the local executive for Glendale Community Service was introduced and discussed at quite some length. Within a short time information will be at hand concerning the possible executive available for Glendale. The executive committee has charge of hiring the individual. The national organization of Community Service merely serves as a clearing house and tries to locate individuals who have had community service training in the field and as local executives. The demand for such so far exceeds the supply that it is said to be quite difficult to obtain one without letting the field work of the national organization suffer.

George B. Karr reported on the progress being made in connection with the campaign for the $25 dinner to be given on January 25 for the purpose of financing the remainder of Glendale Community Service budget.

DID YOU EVER STOP TO THINK—

BY E. R. WAITE,
Secretary, Shawnee, Oklahoma, Board of Commerce

THAT a city looks like its citizens.

THAT if there is anything wrong with your citizens, there is somthing wrong with your city.

THAT people judge a city by its looks.

THAT if your back lots are filled with unsightly trash, your public buildings full of dirt and rubbish, there is something wrong with your city. Clean up your city! Keep it clean! It means dollars and cents to you!

THAT more cities die for want of public spirit than for any other reason.

THAT when a manufacturer is looking for a location and a home, and he goes into a city and finds it full of business and enthusiasm and everybody working to build up the city as well as his own business, he joins the crowd. That city looks to him like a good place to establish his business.

THAT however, when he goes to a city where every one is gloomy, where the people seem to be wandering around in a circle, where they have no faith in their city or its future, naturally he moves on to a better city.

THAT some of the most interesting gentlemen in our insane asylums, are the ones who have the thrift instinct so highly developed that they hoard everything they can get their hands on. They have a lot in common with many outside of the asylum, who so selfishly hoard and refuse to help anyone but themselves. All the insane people are not locked up.

MEXICO'S TENNIS CHAMP

MEXICO CITY, MEXICO — Claude Marsh Butlin, for more than a quarter of a century the singles tennis champion of Mexico, has won the 1922 singles crown of the Republic. He is a Britisher.

A certain couple, having been married about ten years, lived a life made up for the most part of quarrels and bickerings. One day the husband went to visit a friend whose home life was entirely different.

On leaving he said to his friend: "I have enjoyed my visit here. You seem to be so happy; how do you manage it?"

"It's quite simple," replied his friend; "I make a fuss over my wife, and kiss her quite often."

The husband decided to try this method, and when, on arriving home, his wife opened the door, he kissed her. His wife burst into tears.

"What's the matter?" he asked.

"Oh, dear," sobbed the wife. "Everything has gone wrong today. I fell down and broke a lot of china, the dog has pulled all the clothes off the line, the maid has given notice, and now you come home drunk."

The stonebreaker regarded the pile of stones before him sorrowfully. It was very large and the day was drawing to a close.

The village clergyman came along and, seeing him, shouted out:

"Hello, John! Plenty of work to do—eh?"

"Ay," said the stone breaker. "Them stones are like the ten commandments."

"Why's that?" asked the parson.

"You can go on breaking them," was the reply, "but you can't never get rid of 'em!"

U. S. Becoming Invincible at Tennis

By HENRY L. FARRELL
United Press Sports Editor

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Picking the ten best tennis players in America last year wasn't near the job that it was in 1921. Performances of the leading stars were so outstanding that they adjusted themselves almost automatically.

Tilden, Johnston, Richards and Williams as the leaders among the men players were foregone conclusions. Their records made msitakes impossible.

Many critics found fault with the judgment of the ranking body in placing Wallace F. Johnson, the Philadelphia cut-stroke expert, in fifth place. It wasn't that he is not highly regarded as a tennis player, but because he competed in less engagements than some of the players listed below him.

* * * * * * *

Mrs. Molla Mallory, of course, could be placed nowhere but No. 1 among the women players. She may not be the greatest player in the world, but she was the best in America last season.

In placing the Boston girl, Miss Leslie Bancroft, in second position, the committee bumped up against some criticism from the friends and followers of the California girl star, Helen Mills.

Miss Bancroft did beat the California girl several times during the season, but no one gave Mrs. Mallory the number of stiff battles that little Helen did.

Some critics also found fault with the committee for failing to include Miss Mary K. Browne, the former champion, on the list.

* * * * * * *

Ranking the ten best tennis players or the ten best performers in any branch of sport is strictly a matter of opinion, and there always will be differences in opinions.

No ranking ever will be generally accepted as perfect, but the work of the tennis committee last year was as near as humanly possible to perfection.

* * * * * * *

Fear that the game of William Tilden would be impaired by the amputation of a part of a finger on his racquet hand seems to be unfounded.

The real nature of the handicap will not be known until the champion gets down to some real competition.

In his first match of the indoor season he did not seem to be crippled, and as he is of the type of player who is at best when the going is the hardest, there is no reason to put on mourning for him so soon.

Green Memories

By JOHN BRECK

The cattleman had been giving me the data on his gamble on scrawny Arizona-bred longhorns turned out to fatten on the more generous California range. "Yes, it'll take 'em a year before they're fit to finish off. 'Tisn't that the shipping goes so hard, but they've got everything to learn—where to eat and drink and sleep, and all the rest of it."

"Most folks figure a cow eats where her feet take her, and lies down where they stop," I commented.

"Spose so. That's why most folks lose money in cows. Why, a cow thinks more about her comfort than any beast that came out of the ark—less'n it's a horse, and he's downright persnickerty. Only cattle are slower getting settled down, 'cause they're long on memory and short on imagination. They have to try everything out. But they're thorough. Give 'em time, and they'll know every patch of browse, just what it's good for and when it's pleasantest to feed there. An east wind'll send 'em up the canyon; a west'll put 'em over behind the hill. North, and they'll get into the pines. They'll bed down well up in the brush of a lee slope when there's rain in the wind. But when it's a dry frost they'll pick a pocket close down by the creek. It's the same with a horse, only he's a little quicker on the uptake. I believe a horse remembers every place he's ever seen. And either of 'em remembers the home range well enough to hanker after it."

Memory! I was skeptical. That didn't prove memory. That merely proved that they were upset by the breaking up of their habits. At home they followed the routine of the herd; and when they were transplanted they had blindly to grope out a new routine for themselves. That either of them could carry any one spot in her mind clearly enough to prefer it to another seemed unbelievable. But the next Sunday I had a convincing illustration.

Dump wagons occasionally come for sand from the creek bed before my door—a lovely deep ravine with overhanging thickets shading its steep sides, and grassy ledges haunted by the rabbits and the quail. But the worn old jades slumped along through it with their underlips lopped and their ears sagging down. Whether they dragged their toes before the empty wagon, or pulled straining at a load which creaked their collars, their eyes seemed alert only for the lash. What miles they traveled up on the dreary pavements is beyond knowing; how intricately they twisted and turned. But on Sunday morning when they broke out of their dusty corral, they remembered exactly where they wanted to go.

Straight to a rich green patch on the south bank of the creek which had defied the frost. There, safe from prying eyes or biting wind, they warmed their old bones in the sunshine, filling their gaunt sides till it took a luxurious effort to curl their tongues about another verdant tuft. That they have not been back is doubtless not their fault. But wherever they lean their heads together waiting for a load, they have at least one green memory to share between them.

American Musician Upsets Parliament

Paul Specht, noted American musical director, composer and pianist, recently upset the British parliament and aroused the ire of the British press because he took American syncopated orchestras to London to compete with homebred talent. Unions in England protested, and the matter was discussed at length in the house of commons, where legislation was proposed to curb the American invasion.

Slater was absorbed in the evening paper when his young son's crying disturbed him.

"What is that child howling for now?" he demanded, irritably.

"He wants his own way," said Mrs. Slater.

"Well," argued Slater, absentmindedly, as his eye fell on a particularly interesting item, "if it's his, why don't you let him have it?"

SPEED IN SORTING MAIL

The postoffice at Detroit recently announced that Miss Nina E. Holmes, twenty-year-old sorter, in that city, had broken all Detroit records by sorting in eight hours 20,610 letters, or at the rate of 43 letter per minute.

This report reached Great Britain and an inquiry was made as to the greatest speed attained in the London postoffice. An unofficial statement was made that one clerk in a provincial office had been known to distribute 26,400 pieces of mail in eight hours, and mention was made of some who had achieved a letter a second.

The New York postoffice, according to its bulletin of information, has an employe by the name of Miss Cargill, twenty-six years old, in service three years, who recently sorted 31,215 letters in eight hours, or in excess of a letter a second. Several clerks of the New York postoffice are known to have exceeded sixty letters a minute, and one sorted eighty-eight letters a minute.

Of course, a higher speed can be maintained for a short period than in a trial of eight hours. Aaron Jacobson, a clerk at the foreign station at New York, has a record of distributing 22,400 letters in seven hours, and this record in the face of the fact that it is exceptionally difficult to accomplish, owing to the varieties of writing found in addresses on foreign mail and the poor character of penmanship.

A. Lazaroff and M. Reisner of the Varick street station of the New York office, sorted respectively 28,550 and 28,525 letters, or at the rate of almost sixty a minute.

A visitor was admiring a beautiful monument in an ancient church. Gazing at the effigies of a ruffled knight and stately dame, with a kneeling train of children behind each figure, he mused aloud:

"Surely such surroundings must have a purifying influence!"

"Yes, indeed, sir," was the startling reply of the church cleaner, who had walked up unobserved. "Many a time I've washed them images' faces for 'em, when a flick of a duster was all that was expected of me!"

Teacher—Bobby, don't you know that there is no whispering allowed in school?

Bobby—Yes, ma'am. I wasn't whispering aloud.

PEACE IN COAL IN SIGHT AT CONFERENCE

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—(United Press)—Peace in the coal industry was believed in sight today as operators and miners met to frame a new contract for the bituminous coal fields.

The conference was arranged at Chicago when the meeting of the coal men broke up in disagreement over the terms of the new contract.

During the past two weeks representatives of the operators and miners have been working on a new contract, which they hope will be acceptable to both sides. This draft will be presented to the conference opening today and is reported to be based on the old four-states agreement.

Miners and operators have waged a bitter war over the terms of the new agreement for months.

Operators from the start have demanded a district settlement. They declared to settle with all of the districts as a unit would leave them open to indictments by the Federal government, similar to those of 1920.

The original proposal of the operators provided for wage scales fixed individually by each of the fifteen districts: arbitration of all differences, to include an arbitration committee appointed by the president, and a sliding wage scale, to take care of fluctuating prices between competitive fields.

This proposal was submitted to the miners at a meeting in Chicago early in December. Opposition of union heads was so strong that the arbitration and sliding wage scale clauses were immediately eliminated. Miners, however, declared they would not consider the district settlement and the meeting broke up.

At the conference of more than 250 miners and operators from all fields in Chicago, January 3, the matter was thrown before the whole conference. For three days the battle raged over the new contract. Operators were still firm in their stand for district settlement and miners refused to accept.

Telegrams were received from President Harding's Fact Finding committee urging that the present agreement be continued for a year to give the committee a chance to report. The conference, however, broke up with the understanding that a last effort would be made today.

The four-state agreement provides for a settlement in the Central competitive field comprising the states of Illinois, Indiana, Ohio and Western Pennsylvania.

A large percentage of the soft coal mined yearly in the United States is dug in this section and miners declared that an agreement in this field would force other fields to settle or to face a strike, while the Central district took all the cream off the business.

DOOR STOP

As convenient as it is amusing is a door stop in the form of a bland little Chinaman who squats on a black cushion.

An Englishman, who knew no language but his own, had lost his way in Rome. In his perplexity it occurred to him to write the name of his hotel in large letters on his card, and hand it to the first benign looking individual he met.

The Italian thus accosted turned, and with the charming manner of his race, accompanied the perturbed Englishman for about 20 minutes in solemn silence, until they reached the hotel designated.

In a transport of joy at finding himslf once more on known ground the tourist poured out voluble thanks in the only language at his command.

At this the Italian looked at him in amazement and remarked in perfect English:

"I thought you were deaf and dumb!"

FORD SKIRT IS FREAK, SAYS EXPERT

BY HEDDA HOYT
Fashion Editor, The United Press

PARIS, FRANCE—Freak styles may originate in Paris, but it is some wild-eyed American buyer, seeking a thriller for a cheap American gown house, who puts them into vogue.

Out of the hundreds of Parisian gowns, he picks up a freak model which was never considered seriously in Paris, brings it to an American loft, where it is duplicated by the thousands, and sends it on its way from Boston to San Francisco. Its lines are always unusual and distinctly unique. Skinny flappers and stout matrons fall for it, like babies fall for lollipops.

This year's "Ford" is the circular skirt which shows the leg to the calf in front and back, and swoops down on the sides until it touches the sidewalk. It is the most unsightly sight on our streets today. Undoubtedly it originated in Paris, but in all Paris I have never seen one of them.

American women are always keen on dressing alike. Bow-legged women, stouts and flappers all wear the same gowns. There are some styles which they can all get away with without stopping traffic, but this hideous side-dipping skirt is not one of them. No one looks smart in them, and it's time some wideawake American designer got up and screamed in protest.

One wonders what the little eastside manufacturer who happened to pick this side-shin protector thinks of it all! He certainly started something.

While hems are dragging their way through snow and mud in New York, they are being worn shorter in Paris than they were a year ago. The medium length skirt has come back for street wear.

Extremely short skirts will not be worn in Paris for some time at least, and the Parisian gown houses tell me that they never wore them in Paris as short as they did in the United States.

We always seem to "out-Paris" Paris. Perhaps that is why one smiles when reaching Paris that the states are far ahead of Paris in style.

But after one is over here a while, one begins to notice one thing—the Parisian women are not quite a lot of sheep. They do not look for bizarre and unusual effects which are bound to become overpopular. They adopt the reigning styles only if they conform with their lines and personalities.

BRITON HAS A GAME PRESERVE IN CRATER

LONDON.—A volcano as a hunting preserve. That is the plan of Sir Charles Ross, inventor of the Ross rifle, of Balnagown castle, Ross-shire. Sir Charles first saw the spot which is to become his future shooting place when it was part of German East Africa. The wealth of game of all kinds abounding in the crater of the volcano, which has been extinct for so many years that it is overgrown with jungle, so excited the big-game hunter that he set about to acquire the property.

The crater is the center of a chain of volcanoes, roughly 90 to 30 miles in extent, the crater is the home of game estimated at 75,000 head. Sir Charles bought the crater at a sale of ex-enemy property.

The original of all the mother-in-law stories is said to be the following: As the cave man was gnawing at a bone one morning the cave woman rushed in yelling. "Quick! Get your club! "Quick!" "What's the row?" growled the cave man. "Sabertooth tiger chasing mother," gasped the cave woman breathlessly. "Oh, ——!" said the cave man. "What do I care what happens to a saber tooth tiger?"

EX-SERVICE MEN TO BE TAUGHT PRINTING

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan. 16.—Arrangements have been completed to provide the International Typographical Union technical course in the printing arts to disabled ex-service men, the expense to be defrayed by the government vocational training service.

The course contains lessons on display advertising and high class commercial work, as well as on punctuation, type faces and purely technical phases of the craft. Ex-service men will be required to serve an apprenticeship period before admission to union membership, officials said, since any other course would prove unfair to the individual. The course is intended as supplemental to practical experience. Under rules of the International all apprentice printers are required to take the course.

AT THE THEATRES

QUINCY ADAMS SAWYER HAS 16 STARS

Through the efforts of Arthur Sawyer of Sawyer-Lubin Pictures organization, which produced the Metro-SL Special "Quincy Adams Sawyer," now at the Glendale theater, one of the most notable lists of screen players ever assembled for a single production appears in the film version of Charles Felton Pidgin's famous story.

When the initial preparations were being made for transferring this story of New England life to the screen, Mr. Sawyer announced that he would obtain the most distinguished cast possible. For six weeks he worked with Clarence G. Badger, director of the photoplay, to this end, and as a result secured the services of sixteen players whose names are familiar to every motion picture fan.

Among these sixteen is Blanche Sweet, who returns to the screen after an absence of almost two years. She enacts the leading feminine role, that of Alice Pettingill. John Bowers has the title part; Lon Chaney is seen as Obadiah Strout, the czar of Mason's corner. Barbara La Marr plays Lindy Putnam, the small-town vampire. Elmo Lincoln is cast for Abner Stiles, the blacksmith. Louise Fazenda has a comedy role, that of Mandy Skinner, the "sauciest girl in Mason's Corner."

Other leading parts are taken by equally notable screen players, including Edward Connelly, Claire McDowell, Joseph Dowling and Zazu Pitts.

"THE EBB TIDE" FULL OF THRILLS AT T. D. & L.

For thrills, dramatic action and exceptional appeal one can safely recommend "Ebb Tide" a Paramount picture now at the T. D. & L. theater. It is a delightful picturization of Robert Louis Stevenson's and Lloyd Osbourne's famous story, and there isn't a dull moment in it.

The plot is an interesting one, and the characters are played by actors and actresses who are worthy of the task of portraying a group of fiction's most famous folk. Lila Lee, James Kirkwood, Raymond Hatton, George Fawcett, Noah Beery and Jacqueline Logan are the featured players. The night scenes in this picture are the most artistic and realistic that we have yet seen on the silver sheet. The locale of the story is partly in Tahiti and partly in a pearling island. There are several scenes that are real thrillers, a fight with an octopus, a burning ship, a storm at sea. "Ebb Tide" is a Paramount picture with a punch.

It had taken a lot of hinting, but eventually Johnny had succeeded in getting his mother to give him a dime. But he had failed to thank her for it.

"Johnny, what should you say when you get something?" she remonstrated.

"I don't know, ma."

"You don't know? Why, what does mother say when father gives her money?"

"You say, 'Is that all?' don't you, ma?"

A stout man of unpunctual habits was hurrying toward the station. He looked uncomfortably hot. An acquaintance, happening to see him, took the occasion as very suitable for a joke at his friend's expense, and called out:

"Now, Mr. Short, are you training for a race?"

Mr. Short just managed to yell back:

"No, you simpleton; I'm racing for a train!"

THE AMERICAN BOND IS NEW FELLOWSHIP

Organized in Detroit to Aid Fighting Lawless Element in Country

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 16.—There was officially launched in this city yesterday in a number of the largest churches "the American Bond"—the name indicating the tie of loyalty firmly binding all true patriots—a civic fellowship—a nation-wide movement to promote Americanism and loyalty to the laws of the United States.

Sebastian S. Kresge, nationally known merchant; Henry M. Leland, the auto manufacturer; Joseph Boyer, of the Burroughs Adding Machine Co., are among those actively interested in this movement, which has for its executive secretary, Howard Hyde Russell, founder of the Anti-Saloon league and the Lincoln-Lee Legion.

The American Bond, while a distinctive organization, has the active support of the Lincoln-Lee Legion, with its 6,000,000 members, and the Anti-Saloon league, with its 42,000 units, including churches.

The American Bond is the outgrowth of a meeting held some months ago in Detroit by prominent business men of the United States, who had become alarmed at the growth of the spirit of lawlessness and who were seeking some educational means to stem the feeling of disregard for the statutes and Constitution of the United States.

Four branches of educational work are being instituted:

1. Cooperation with public and private week-day schools, Sunday schools, and other youth groups, with up-to-date methods to instill a love of country and obedience to law in the minds and hearts of the voters of tomorrow.

2. The dissemination through printed matter of the basic principles of The American Bond with a plea for the upholding of the dignity of the law in every section of the country without fear or favor.

3. A mail correspondence school to be conducted between a national commission of business and professional leaders and the influential moulders of thought and action of the various communities throughout the United States.

4. Direct personal teaching and public addresses by able speakers who will visit the churches, schools, clubs and other organizations to inspire active interest and support.

The enrollment obligation of The American Bond which everyone is invited to take is:

"To promote loyalty to Flag and Law I hereby enroll in The American Bond. I promise to obey all laws of nation and state and to insist upon like obedience by all others in the spirit of the American's Creed, as follows:

"I believe in the United States of America as a government of the people, by the people, for the people, whose just powers are derived from the consent of the governed; a Democracy in a Republic; a sovereign Nation of many sovereign States; a perfect union, one and inseparable; established upon those principles of Freedom, Equality, Justice and Humanity for which American patriots sacrificed their lives and fortunes. I therefore believe it is my duty to my country to love it, to support its Constitution, to obey its laws, to respect its flag, and to defend it against all enemies."

At a meeting in 1921 a committee was appointed by the American Bar association to investigate crime and law enforcement. After a year's survey it made its report which showed a great increase in acts of violence and burglary, not to mention minor violations of the law.

The committee, therefore, made these recommendations:

That swift and certain punishment be meted out for crime.

That first offenders, and first offenders only, should be eligible for probation, and that boards of parole shall, for the safety of the public, be more rigorous in their administration.

That the manufacture and sale of pistols and cartridges shall be absolutely prohibited save and except as necessary for government and official use.

After considering this report the founders of The American Bond came to the conclusion that as the legal forces of the country were awakening to the fact that crime should be dealt with more severely and expeditiously, their field lay in the education of not only the adults, but the future voters—the children—patriotically to understand the laws and not only obey them, but seek to have others do likewise.

While Michigan has the honor of being the home state of The American Bond, plans are under way rapidly and strongly to nationalize this movement.

HARLEY PRESTON TO OPEN REALTY OFFICE HERE

Harley G. Preston, formerly pastor of the Pacific Avenue Community Methodist church, who resigned that position to go into subdivision work as a salesman, announces his intention of going into real estate business for himself in Glendale. Mr. Preston said today:

"I am well satisfied with the change made and it has been a treat to be free to hear the other ministers in various pulpits. As to my work at Ivanhoe Hills subdivision, I can say that I have enjoyed the work and have done very well, and shall still be glad to sell anyone interested, that property, but I believe it will be to my best interests to focus my time and attention on business in Glendale proper, as I have here a large circle of acquaintances. I now have a good assortment of listings of property, both improved and unimproved, business and residence, and a few good ranches. Folks who advised with me, while pastor of the church, made money on my suggestions relative to property matters, and while I do not claim to be infallible, still I do claim to be fairly well acquainted with Glendale and values here. I shall be pleased to have the listings of my friends and acquaintances who desire to sell; also inquiries from any who are in the market for homes or investments."

Mr. Preston stated his temporary place of business would be at 312 West Colorado street (Colorado and Central, Dr. Marlenee's Court), phone Glendale 2703-W. A little later another location will be found.

PRINTERS DENY UNION INJURED DE VINNE CO.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Jan 16.—Blame placed on the growth and development of the International Typographical Union as a contributing factor in the passing of the DeVinne Press, famous old printing house of New York, by James M. Bothwell, president of the company, has aroused much discussion in the organized printing trade.

"Mr. Bothwell's statement would constitute a stronger indictment of unionism, in the minds of uninformed persons, if he had not added that there was no longer any demand for fine printing, such as the DeVinne specialized in," said J. W. Hays, international secretary-treasurer of the union. "The dissolution of the De Vinne house is regretted by printers everywhere who take an interest in their art.

"Printing prices have been increased because of increases in costs of all things that enter into good printing. The same thing is true of other manufacturing. The unions have not tended to reduce the art to mediocrity, but on the contrary have done all in their power to bring about better craftsmanship. Proper training of apprentices has been a chief aim. The two leading printing unions—the printers and pressmen—maintain courses of instruction and trade schools to bring higher artistic and mechanical development in the crafts. If appreciation of fine printing no longer prevails as it once did the fault does not lie with the union craftsman. The founder of the DeVinne Press, Theodore L. DeVinne, one of the greatest of American printers, would, I am sure, decline to indorse Mr. Bothwell's statement if he were alive today."

A crowded motor car was spinning along a mountain road in Colorado. Suddenly as it swung round a curve the highly strung passenger who was sitting next the driver realized that less than twenty yards away was a hair-pin bend down a sharp hill. He looked at the driver, wondering whether he dared ask him a question. It was a death-trap; he was terrified; he had to say something to keep his nerve. "Do people lose their lives here frequently?" he asked.

"Not more than once," said the driver as he took a firmer grip of the wheel.

"Are you aware, sir," called the reveller who had awakened the householder, "that one of your windows is open?"

"Which?" asked the man of the house.

"Well, as a matter of fact," said the other, "it's the one you're looking out of."

CONCERNING EPILEPSY

By H. ADDINGTON BRUCE
Author of "The Riddle of Personality," "Self-Development," Etc.
(Copyright, 1923, by The Associated Newspapers)

With increasing appreciation of the true status of epilepsy as a symptom of disease rather than a disease in itself, progress is continually being made toward a solution of the difficult problem it presents. Factors formerly unrecognized as causes of epileptic attacks are now seen to play sometimes a decisive part, and treatment directed against them has brought relief to numerous unfortunates who in earlier times would have had to suffer all their days.

Of special helpfulness is the discovery of the causal influence that may be exercised by so-called focal infection and by auto-intoxication from intestinal putrefaction, or from poisoning by foods nourishing to other people but for some reason borne badly by the epileptic.

What seemingly happens in these cases is the development of an abnormal nervous irritability, which persists until the source of infection has been removed or necessary changes made in the diet. Occasionally a first essential remedial measure is treatment to correct dental defects which prevent proper chewing of food and thus promote auto-intoxication.

Such treatment may indeed be needed far more frequently than is generally suspected even today. Hale Powers, studying fifty consecutive victims of epilepsy, from three and a half to sixty years of age, found only ten whose teeth could be described as good or fairly good.

"All of the fifty," Powers remarks, "were constipated. Twenty-five readily admitted that they were bolters, and eleven that they habitually ate too much."

In the experience of the same physician, over-eating, particularly after an illness or an injury through accident, may itself be a provoking cause of epilepsy. He gives as a typical case:

"A girl of ten years of age, and otherwise well, was discovered by the school physician to have heart murmur, and was advised to rest and have 'plenty of nourishing food.'

"Forced feeding was begun, and she ate four eggs daily for about six months. She became fat and constipated, and then began to have petit mal attacks."

Here, to be sure, there is the possibility that, not the over-eating, but an intolerance for eggs, was responsible for the epilepsy. When food poisoning must be reckoned with, skin tests are a useful modern aid to detect the offending food. So, too, the use of X-ray pictures as a diagnostic means should not be omitted if there is reason to suspect focal infection of teeth, sinuses, etc.

As to general dietary measures in epilepsy the important thing seems to be to avoid foods tending to indigestion, putrefaction and constipation. This means reduction of the meat intake, the non-use of fried foods, fresh white bread and other foods difficult of digestion. There is less insistence nowadays on putting epileptics on a salt-free diet, but such a diet is assuredly of real helpfulness in many cases.

Then, too, recent research is emphasizing the psychic as well as physical factors in epilepsy. There are epileptics who seemingly need more than anything else environmental changes and training in emotional control. Of this I shall have more to say on another occasion.

TENANTS RULE IN YUCATAN, MEXICO

By FRED'K G. NEUMEIER
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

MEXICO CITY, Mex., (By mail).—Tenants reign supreme in Yucatan, the Land of Topsy Turvy.

The laws of this Socialist state of Mexico are all in favor of the tenant and the landlord must bow to the desires of the tenant.

There are no problems of high rentals or dispossessing.

Under the laws, rental of houses for habitation, commerce, theatres, places of amusement and for purposes of charity is declared to be of public interest.

As long as the tenant pays his rent, he may as often as he desires prolong his present contract. This right, however, can only be exercised by the tenant.

A tenant can be dispossessed when he has not paid the rental for four months, where he has deliberately injured the buildings, where he has violated the contract with respect to the use of the house, when the contract is terminated, or when the owner can prove that the house is the only one that he has and that he needs it for himself for his own living.

Rental of houses cannot exceed seven percent annually of the assessed valuation of the house for taxation purposes. This seven per cent includes all taxes to be paid. If the owner refuses to accept this payment, the renter can pay the rent to the treasury of the state.

The payment of deposits or bonds in connection with rental contracts is strictly prohibited. It is also prohibited for the tenant to pay any bonus whatsoever besides the rental established by law.

The law also provides that in renting a house the rental contract must be accompanied by a certificate showing the assessed valuation of the property and also that the taxes have been paid to date.

All repairs to keep the house in a habitable condition must be paid by the owner.

Landlords must keep their houses occupied and the law provides that any landlord who keeps his house unoccupied, even though covered by a contract will be fined the equivalent in U. S. currency of from $5 to $250.

The professor was very absent-minded and it came as a great surprise to him when his wife placed a beautiful bunch of flowers on his desk one morning.

"Why, what does this mean, my dear?" he asked.

"Why, don't you remember?" she exclaimed. "This is the anniversary of your wedding day."

"Ah, is that so?" he answered politely. "Please let me know when yours comes around, and I will reciprocate.

Truths in Epigram

Treat your friend as if he might become an enemy.—Publius Syrus.

True happiness consists not in the multitude of friends but in the worth and choice.—Ben Johnson.

There is more to be feared from unspoken and concealed, than from open and declared hostility.—Cicero.

PRISON REFORM

Everybody is interested in prison reform. This includes even the individuals who know nothing of the subject, have never seen the inside of a prison, nor come into contact with a criminal. Thus an address by an ex-prisoner, in advocacy of prison reform, cannot fail to make wide appeal.

Once, the prison was a place merely for penalty and restraint. It was run without a thought that the inmate was a human being, capable of performing the duties of useful citizenship. It was intended to strike terror into his soul, and generally succeeded. At least he was sure to emerge far worse than when he went in. All this has been changed. The prisons now are conducted by humane officials who take a genuine interest in their charges, and who feel highly gratified when they have succeeded in reconstructing the morals of the convict.

Theories that the criminal is but a mentally sick person do not, however, strike full response. Were he wise he would not be a criminal, but were the average individual who fails in life, endowed with wisdom, he would not be among the failures. The criminal is too shrewd to be reckoned irresponsible mentally. The business of theft in its varied forms, runs into enormous sums. The underworld, the world of crime, is definitely organized. It protects all its members. It is ready with lawyers and with bondsmen. Often the deserved penalty is evaded, and often the profits are undisturbed, save as they have to be shared with counsel. There is no insanity about this; far from it. It is business most adroitly managed.

Society does not want to send the irresponsible to prison; neither does it desire to be bluffed and outgeneraled by rogues who would be glad to be classed as irresponsible.

THE BROKEN HEART

Constantine, late king of Greece, is said to have died of a broken heart. The ground for the assertion is that he is dead, and that his life had been marked by certain disappointments, the truth being that people do not die of broken hearts. The use of the term is tolerated only by poetic license. Constantine had lived fast. He had crowded much into his span. Every day men of less age, and far more useful are called from their labors. They do not die of broken hearts; neither did he.

As a king, Constantine was a failure. In the world war he proved recreant to his royal trust, and was forced from the throne into exile, his son succeeding him. The son was killed by the bite of a monkey, and Constantine called back to the throne. From the first, he made trouble. His fatal mistake was the inauguration of a war with Turkey. The result was that his troops came back from the territory they had invaded, with a Turkish army at their heels. The presence of this army almost upset all Europe.

For a second time the throne was deftly jerked from beneath the Constantine personality. He did not happen to land on any comfortable station in this instance. There was no country that offered him welcome. He seemed to be a superfluity. Then came the announcement of his death, not particularly untimely, for he had done enough mischief.

AMERICA OUT OF IT

France is reported as being deeply hurt by withdrawal of American troops from the Rhine. Germany also is stated to view the order with consternation. There really seems no reason why either power should feel perturbed.

This country has made clear, through the declaration of the senate that it does not feel concerned in the affairs of Europe. Europe has been assured that whether it arrive at a condition of peace, or reach a state of war, matters nothing over here. America did not interfere before France had become aggressive, and if this was wise policy it certainly has no reason for interfering now. It was once the ally of France. It never has been the ally of Germany. It kept hands off while France was being quietly squeezed to death. Now that France has asserted itself, and has declined to be victimized any further, it does not appear that this country, aloof and indifferent, should be aroused to a state of sudden frenzy.

The people of this country are truly sorry if the French feel injured. At the same time they are at a loss as to what may be done about it.

A correspondent mentions the case of Captain Diamond, who died at Oakland at the reputed age of 118. The captain was a man of abstemious life. The correspondent uses his case to offset that of an Altadena citizen who, at the age of 105, still uses tobacco, and would be willing to accept a drink were the same to be proffered.

The trouble with the Diamond citation is the grave doubt that the captain ever attained to the great age he claimed, the claim doubtless advanced in good faith. When Diamond conceived himself to have reached the century mark he walked into a San Francisco newspaper office, and so announced. He was not believed by the editor then. He was unable to adduce any proof that his story was correct. He had the appearance of being about seventy-five. But he stuck to the century year consistently thereafter. He died, according to this rating, at the age of 118. As a matter of fact, it is highly probable that he passed away in his nineties. This is not the slightest aspersion upon his own sincerity. He thought he was 100 when he said he was.

Centenarians continue to be rare. They do not result from adherence to any set of rules. Each makes his or her own rules. If one is born with the necessary constitution, and escapes accident, one lives a century. If one lack the constitution, he or she dies an appreciable term of years sooner.

French troops are now in German territory. It is to be remembered that during the years of a recent bitter war, German troops were in various countries where there was no desire for their presence. All the time, German territory remained unscathed, German property intact. Perhaps the present conditions will give the Teutonic people a valuable idea as to the experiences their neighbors had to undergo.

Why Men Don't Wear Gay Clothes

By DR. FRANK CRANE

The reason why men may not wear gayly colored clothes is that the women will not stand for it.

And the reason why they will not suffer it is curious.

Dr. Frank Crane

It illustrates one of the common illusions which have got themselves into universal acceptance.

That delusion is that man is the chooser and woman is the chosen. Everybody takes this for granted. It is rather a pleasing fiction—for the men. And the women like to indulge them in this belief. But it is all wrong.

Bernard Shaw wrote a play, "The Superman," the motif of which is that the man is a helpless creature, and if a woman makes up her mind to get him, he'd just as well cease struggling. Most of us took the play to be a whimsical piece of humor. It was funny, but, like a good deal of Shaw's fun, there is a serious truth running beneath it.

There is no field in which "things are not what they seem" so truly as in the lists of love. The lover flatters himself that he is wooing his maid and gradually enclosing her in his net. Yet all the while the poor boob is being played with by the wise little girl, and if she wants him she lands him, and if she does not want him she gets rid of him.

It is much the same after marriage. The man walks about, throwing out his chest, speaking in a deep bass voice, and laying the flattering unction to his soul that he is the boss of his own house. He is not. He is a sort of trained bear. And the average woman manages him easily.

Often forlorn maidens complain that they have to sit around like blackberries on a stem waiting for some man to come along and fancy them. Hence they rail at the universe and the nature of things, and cry out against this cruel world. But the matter is with them, and not with the world.

And all this has proof in the fact that women array themselves in flowery colors and see to it that men's garments are sober and unnoticeable. For it is always the choosing sex in the matter of mating which adorns itself.

We can see this in the lower animals. It is the barnyard cock that carries the flaming red comb and the long, glistening tail feathers, while the hens are drab little affairs.

The same is true in almost all other bird tribes. Among them the male chooses, and, consequently, it is he that has the gorgeous plumage and the bright colors, while the female is a modest little creature.

The same thing, to a certain extent, is true among fishes, and among wild animals, and, to a certain degree, it is true among plants. It is a law of Nature, but only of Nature previous to the appearance of mankind upon the scene.

In the Spring a livelier iris changes on the burnished dove;
In the Spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love.

From time to time men have attempted to escape from the tyranny of black in evening dress. The poor things desperately want to wear something that will differentiate a guest from a waiter. But it's no use. About twenty years ago scarlet dress coats made their appearance in Paris, and, afterward, blue was tried; but it would not do.

Recently another attempt was made. Two young men wore purple dinner jackets with light pink collars and revers at a theater. Their effort to start a new style was unavailing.

Woman, the chosen sex, the superior sex, is not going to let her victim wear colors.

THE RIGHT WORD

By W. CURTIS NICHOLSON

DISCUSSION CLUB

(Join)

The Split Infinitive

J. M. T.: "'The Right Word' has often advised against the use of the split infinitive. In this evening's issue you say 'Do not split your infinitives.' Do you mind summarizing, for the benefit of those of your readers, who, like your humble servant, are groping for light, the reasons against the use of the split infinitive? I cannot bring myself to regard the use of the split infinitive as a literary crime. I suppose this may be due to my ignorance; but I can, if necessary, show that it has been employed by recognized authorities and its use justified by them. Don't criticize this letter. I'm just 'a common or garden variety' of writer. My diction is probably frightful, and my grammar rotten. There's one thing certain. I'll lose no sleep because of a knowledge of my literary shortcomings. I am just a plain fellow who has a hunch that many good writers split their infinities, and can justify the splitting. Your column is really fine, but you've surely got me guessing as to the wisdom of your unqualified condemnations of the use of the split infinitive."

Mr. Nicholson: "The Right Word" does not itself split its infinitives, or, better still, it has not up to date. But whether or not "The Right Word" may split an infinitive in one of its future articles is another matter. The only reason that such a locution has not been used up to the present time is that the author has not felt so inclined, not that there is anything ungrammatical in the construction, for there is not.

The foregoing letter is excellent. It is true that the split infinitive is frequently found in the writings of good authors, but what is the frequency? Thomas R. Lounsbury defends the locution, and so do many other authorities on good English. What the author of "The Right Word" may believe is one thing; what usage, the great arbiter, dictates is another. "The Right Word" does not condemn its use but believes that 90 per cent of infinitives are not split. Therefore, up to the present time, the advice of "The Right Word" is not to split the infinitive, this advice being based entirely on usage. On the other hand "The Right Word" will not condemn an actual split infinitive unless it is a monstrosity; as, to in the mean time effectually and emphatically bring it to pass.

Some examples will be published later.

WHY NOT? —BY JOHNSON

Songs of the Poets

A Ballade of Suicide—By Gilbert K. Chesterton (1874)

The gallows in my garden, people say,
Is new and neat and adequately tall.
I tied a noose on in a knowing way
As one that knots his necktie for a ball;
But just as all the neighbors—on the wall—
Are drawing a long breath to shout "Hurray!"
The strangest whim has seized me. . . . After all
I think I will not hang myself today.

Tomorrow is the time I get my pay—
My uncle's sword is hanging in the hall—
I see a little cloud all pink and gray—
Perhaps the rector's mother will NOT call—
I fancy that I heard from Mr. Gall
That mushrooms could be cooked another way—
I never read the works of Juvenal—
I think I will not hang myself today.

The world will have another washing day;
The decadents decay; the pedants pall;
And H. G. Wells has found that children play,
And Bernard Shaw discovered that they squall;
Rationalists are growing rational—
And through thick woods one finds a stream astray,
So secret that the very sky seems small—
I think I will not hang myself today.

ENVOI

Prince, I can hear the trumpet of Germinal,
The tumbrils toiling up the terrible way;
Even today your royal head may fall—
I think I will not hang myself today.

IN DEFENSE OF THE YOUNG

By ESTELLE LAWTON LINDSEY

Since man emerged from the primal ooze, perhaps before, age has demanded that youth sacrifice its aspirations on the altar of duty.

And "duty" has been interpreted as anything that will make age happy.

For the first time in history the youth of the world is rebelling and so youth stands badly with those who fasten their faith to "duty."

I've read reams of stuff about the wild youth of my times and my own eyes have seen a good bit of its folly.

Just the same, I stand by youth; I believe in youth and I regard its sacrifice to age a tragedy of international propositions.

Just why—will the aged kindly reply—are the wishes of those who have had a full life, and now find another generation at the helm, of more importance than the wishes of those who are in the thick of the struggle for existence?

Why should the man who has had love, home and children refuse to allow his son the same blessings? Why should the woman whose husband was the most blessed of all blessings whine and make scenes when her daughter desires a husband and babies of her own?

Why should the returned prodigal, who ate the fatted calf and then consented to give the Lord his declining years—feel himself aggrieved if his son thrills to the wanderlust surging through his warm young veins?

Why was it right for Dad to go to sea and wrong for son to go into the movies?

Of course, age always rationalizes its selfishness by saying:

"I know best what is good for you."

But grandfather, do you? When you were young you were an instrument in the hands of the all-pervading life energy. You did as nature moved you to do, did it decently and according to law and order, to be sure; but you did it. Did your father know what was best for you? Did he carry in his breast the sealed orders that nature gave you?

You know that he did not. No more do you now know best what will bring happiness to your son, still less what will bring it to your daughter.

Tell your child, by all means, which you believe will bring happiness; but remember that he lives in a different age from you and he must build his future from the point where he stands.

Advise him; but never, never, as you love him, ask him to live by your desires. The future belongs to youth and youth with clean, undimmed eyes knows it.

EASTERN POINT OF VIEW

ACHIEVING THE IMPOSSIBLE

[Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph]

Somebody has said that our national motto should be: "It can't be done—let's do it." The reference is to the typical American attitude of courage and confidence toward the seemingly impossible task. This trait has just been strikingly exemplified by workers of the American Committee for Devastated France. In the portion of the country that was laid waste by the German invaders is what is known as the Zone Rouge, the "red zone," where government officials have declared the land irreclaimable. In this district the committee has made special efforts. Refusing to be daunted by the pessimistic official prediction, the committee set tractors and other modern farm machinery to work. A syndicate was formed to loan money to the impoverished farmers and they are now beginning to pay back the money. A co-operative society was organized through which the farmers and their laborers were able to buy material at low prices. Fields that long lay waste have been reclaimed, homes have been rebuilt and a whole region that had been officially abandoned is being restored to prosperity and usefulness. And all because a handful of optimistic, determined Americans refused to admit the possibility of failure in the face of great initial discouragement.

This is only a sample of what the American committee has been accomplishing in France ever since the close of the war. It illustrates a single phase of the committee's activities. Another is concerned with the public health. Six years ago training schools for nurses with practical experience in hospitals were virtually unknown in France. Today there are many, thanks to American altruistic enterprise. The French government reports that in the entire department of the Aisne there is an infant mortality rate of 87 per 1000; in the region under the American committee's care the rate is 35 per 1000. Testimony of this sort encourages American supporters of the committee to be even more generous than in the past.

COMMENT ON DAY'S NEWS

By HENRY JAMES

HENRY JAMES

A woman is writing a series of articles designed to prove marriage a failure. She has theories about it. She wants the contract that is to supplant the present system, made so easy that no couple will be quite certain one week that they will be a couple the week after. Each may have another partner by that time.

Children, of course, would be an embarrassment, but the state may take care of them. The family is to be abolished, the social system upset. The relationship of husband and wife is to be fleeting; extending into a series of experiences with different associates. The plan is confusing.

Even in the matter of property it would be difficult to keep track of individual rights. Parents now are under obligation to provide for their offspring. In instances there has been known to be an actual affection between parents and their sons and daughters. To stifle this emotion and regard a boy or girl merely as a social unit without anchorage, would come a little hard at first.

The woman may be basing her view upon her own unhappy life. Therefore it does not appeal to the married folk whose lives have not been unhappy. it is a suggestion, not of betterment, but of mere change. It is the attempt to clothe promiscuity in respectable garb.

People totally unfit for marriage, the immature, the half-wit, and the drunken, are permitted to rush into it. This is the mistake. Such marriages are, in essence, spurious, as manifestly, they are rash and indecent. To dissolve them at the will of either party, so that each may select a more desirable moron mate, does not appear to be the finest remedy. Such alliances cannot be cured, but there must be a method by which they could be prevented.

There is an effort being made to scare the world with the idea of a great red army coming out of Russia to sweep Europe. Probably it is all that quality of stuff rudely termed "bull."

Russia may be able to maintain an army at home, but a country incompetent to keep its own babies from starving, couldn't send an army more than fifty miles from its base.

Judge Gavin Craig of the appellate court drove a little too fast through Glendale. He had to pay a fine of $15, and did so without making any fuss. Where the legal limit was 15 miles he had struck a 26-mile clip. Not so desperately swift at that, but out on the highway a judge is just a plain citizen.

In the effort to suppress the evil the names of unfortunate victims are being made public. Doubtless this pains some of them, but it may have the effect of promoting their cure.

Mary Baker denies that she will marry the Brazilian minister, and the cable throbs with the news. This is very important, but only to the gentleman from Brazil. If Mary were to marry somebody from a point even more distant, and go with him to his habitat, and stay there, the world would be a shade happier.

Mary may be recalled as the flamboyant young flapper who at irregular intervals has promised to meet a suitor at the church, and in each instance has sidestepped, not that she doesn't like the chap, but that she has a mania for publicity. Frankly, Mary is a tiresome person, with nothing but ivory under her bonnet.

Here is a frank challenge. No good in getting mad about it. If the north is able to make a bluff and get away with it, against a southern majority, the laugh is on the majority.

WATCHING THE PARADE

BY JOHN PILGRIM

I telephoned down to the bookstore to send up a reference book of which I had need. A good-looking youngster of eighteen brought it and the bill. He smiled pleasantly, had a nice word or two to say about the weather and the slush and the street car service and took the money.

"Seven dollars and a half," I said, counting it out.

"Yes, sir," he said, counting it after me. "Seven fifty—just."

The smile had gone. He was as grim as an early Christian martyr entering the arena to romp with the lions. Having looked at me as though I were one of his pals he now regarded me as a distinct menace to civilization. I knew what he thought. He thought I should have handed him a quarter.

"Look here," I said. "Wait a minute. Where do you go to school? Who are your folks?"

He told me. He was in the second class at high school, and his folks bear a name that came over in the Mayflower. Perhaps his progenitors did not actually reach this arid land in that emigrant ship, but the name was right. His father is an upstanding, independent, hard-working citizen.

"I know what your grouch is," I said to the kid. "You think I should hand you a tip. What are you, anyway—an American or a foreign-born quarter-grabber? What does your name mean to you? If I were to hand you a quarter now you would take off your hat and say, 'thank you.' What's the matter with you kids? Have you all lost your self-respect?"

He said that all the boys took tips when they got the chance. He did not see anything wrong in it, he said. Anyway, why should I take it out on him? It was mighty funny that I had all that to say about his father being a good American. If his father had ever thought that tip-taking is degrading, wouldn't he have said so?

"I'll say he would," was his peroration.

After all, there is something in what the boy said. Why didn't the father tell him?

GUARANTEE BOUNDARIES, STOP WAR, SAYS BAKER

Former Secy. of War Suggests Solution for European Tangle in Paper to Babson Institute; Comments on Russia

By ROGER BABSON

WELLESLEY HILLS, Mass., Jan. 16.—Hon. Newton D. Baker, who was secretary of war during the great world conflict, has today issued a statement through the Babson Institute. Next to Woodrow Wilson, Mr. Baker is said to have the most intimate personal knowledge of the European war situation of any living man. This is his first public utterance on the subject since he retired March 4, 1921.

"War, as now carried on, cannot be much further continued," says Mr. Baker, in answer to a question on the possibility of permanent peace. "The machinery of destruction has become so efficient and the economic consequences so terrible, that war can no longer be considered. Of course, I do not mean small wars, riots, petty squabbles between small states. When I say, 'war,' I mean that there are five nations capable of making war. These are Great Britain, France, Germany, Japan and the United States. These five nations alone can make war, and the rest of the world can make war only as these five nations lend the others the support of their industrial and financial machinery. War today is an industrial proposition.

"For these five nations, the choice is between peace and suicide. Their affairs are so interrelated that any disturbance in one has its effect on the others. The prosperity of all of them depends upon undisturbed commercial relations. All the argument of safety, profit and self-interest drive these five nations toward peace. Economic as well as humanitarian forces are daily at work to prevent another great war.

"Now, why do great nations go to war? For just one thing: The safety and extension of their frontiers. With a few exceptions, that has been the cause of every great war in history. There are always outsiders, nibbling at the edges; and to secure peace at home, the great power is always seeking to push its frontier back just a little farther. It seems to put a little greater distance between itself and the covetous, unsuccessful beyond the boundary. The way to get peace, then, is to guarantee the frontiers. There is no other practical way. I, therefore, believe that some day, when we have forgotten some of the partisan fury generated over the Versailles treaty, we will undertake to guarantee national boundaries by a league of nations—either this league or some other—but along the lines of Article X.

"But is not this open to the objection of certain Republican senators who honestly believe that boundary lines must of necessity change as nations grow or decline? These senators said Article X is like guaranteeing that a rich family will always be rich. Now, we know that rich families do not remain rich. Their property is disstpated and the grandchildren of the rich family of today will be working for somebody for wages. Of course, the nations when they are inefficient must take the same chance and suffer the same fate. Why should we guarantee them the permanence of their present frontier? This is a fair question and I will try to answer it fronkly.

"I do not propose to guarantee them 'permanence.' I am not sold on the present map of Europe. Perhaps too much emphasis was laid on the principle of nationality and too little on economic solidarity in its making. It is bound to change. But we do not want another war to change it. My proposal is that, when it is changed, it shall be changed as a result of negotiation and award, and not by robbery or pillage.

"For that matter, we are 'guaranteeing' wealth to the rich, now. We are spending untold sums to prevent violence upon property rights. A peaceful changing of frontiers hurts nobody. It is the violent method that costs and that goes to extremes. By negotiations we exchange with each other what true interest justifies; by violence men take all they can get."

Mr. Baker was then asked his opinion regarding Russia and whether he felt Russia should be recognized. Said he:

"So far as the recognition of Russia concerns only their form of government, I would recognize Russia in two seconds. If they want to pick out a perfect fool and make him king, that is no concern of mine. My only hesitation about Russian recognition concern's Russia's attitude toward foreign agreements. Whenever Russia will agree that any foreign undertaking that they enter upon will be honored and observed, then I am for recognizing Russia."

"Would you insist on their paying the old czar's debts to France?" Mr. Baker was asked.

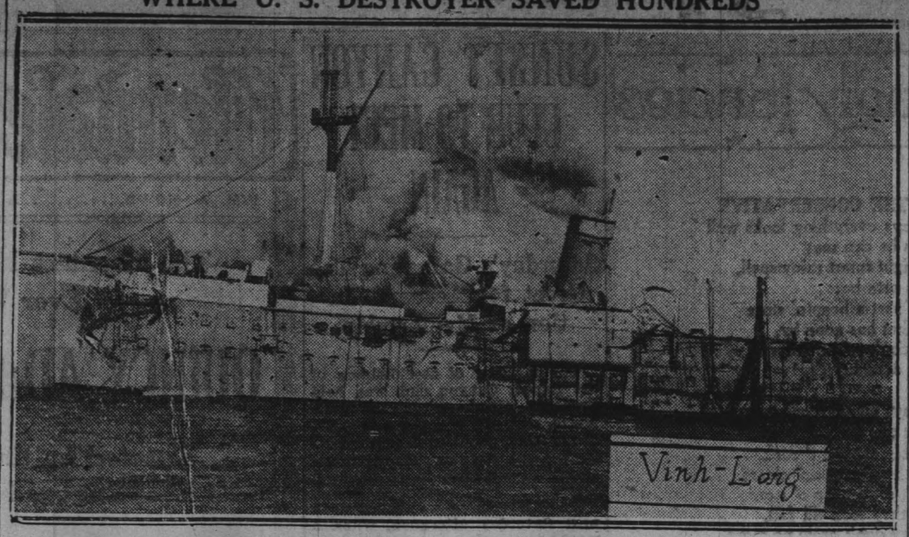

"No," he replied, "no more than I would have insisted on the United States paying the bills of the Southern Confederacy. That is a matter for Russia to decide for itself. The only point that concerns me is that when Russia makes a bargain with the United States or with any other foreign nation, they shall be prepared to stand by it. In other words, the internal organization and political institutions of a country are its own business. True self-interest will lead any government to honor its international obligations. But recognition should not depend upon a mere dislike of the form of government which a people prefer for themselves."

In connection with this statement by Mr. Baker, the following figures show the increase in the debt of Europe owing to the world war:

Country—	1913	1921
United Kingdom	$3,485,818,000	$37,910,000,000
France	6,346,129,000	50,960,000,000
Belgium ...	722,000,000	4,670,000,000
Germany ..	1,194,052,000	71,000,000,000
Italy	2,921,153,000	18,650,000,000
Denmark ..	95,579,000	215,000,000

Surely the resources of Europe are not sufficient both to pay the interest on this huge new debt and to continue the present war expenditures to protect frontiers. Before long we must choose between having some association of nations and having Europe repudiate her indebtedness. Statistics strongly indicate that there is no middle ground or other alternative. Some say that the financial interest of the world brought on the great war. We say that these financial interests will compel the world to accept some sort of a league of nations.

A. P. WARNER SHOWS AUTO OWNERS HOW TO SAVE $25 TO $100

The name Warner is as well, if not better, known, respected and trusted by car owners everywhere as any other automobile accessory name.

Millions of dollars have been been spent for years establishing public confidence in the name of Warner; and millions of car owners have bought and found utmost satisfaction with articles that bear the name Warner. That is why the world believes him and why car owners will refuse substitutes. Therefore, when Mr. A. P. Warner, inventor of the speedometer, the Warner and Patterson lenses and a number of other useful automobile necessities, introduced Warner Liquid Solder, a new and better way to stop leaks in radiators and cooling systems, he gave automobile owners everywhere a means of saving many thousands of dollars annually in unnecessary repair bills on leaky radiators and cooling systems by making it possible for anyone to repair his own car in a very few minutes at an expense of less than $1.00.

Many of the better supply stations and garages in Glendale, Eagle Rock and Burbank carry Warner Liquid Solder and will be glad to explain how this wonderful new invention will not only stop leaks, but will prevent them and preserve the radiator against rust and corosion.

Court's adjourned!

A man, who had several times sought the help of his minister to secure employment, was lounging near a railway station as the pastor was hurrying to catch a train.

"Excuse me, sir," said the unemployed in a trembling voice.

"So you are out of work again," said the minister severely. "It seems to me you get tired of a new employer very quickly."

"Don't misrepresent me, sir," pleaded the man. "It can never be truthfully said that I get tired first."

It often happens that the man who talks much about going to glory has neighbors who wish he'd make a start.

Is an Advertising Investment Good Collateral?

Your money deposited in banks is loaned by bankers upon the security of merchandise whose value has been created and is maintained by advertising.

More and more, bankers are recognizing the essential verity of this principle—that money can be loaned as safely upon a sound advertising investment as upon other collateral which advertising has developed and maintained.

ST. MARK'S TO HAVE BUSY WEEK

Organizations of Church Schedule Many Events in Social Activity

Things are doing at St. Mark's Episcopal church, and a number of events are scheduled for the coming week.

Thursday evening, the first anniversary of the organization of the choir guild will be celebrated with a supper in the guild hall, at which covers will be laid for about thirty. A business session will follow the dinner and then will come the rehearsal of the choir under Mrs. Charles A. Parker.

On Sunday new officers of the church were announced as follows: Senior warden, John Trotter; junior warden, Alex Badger; treasurer, John Trotter; clerk, John T. Cate.

Delegates were also named to the annual convention of the diocese to be held all next week at St. John's church in Los Angeles. The rector, Dr. Kemp, will, of course, attend; also John Trotter, C. H. Hamilton, L. Young and two other delegates to officially represent the parish.

The young women's group, "Daughters of the King," is being organized and will have a meeting this week Wednesday at 2:30, at the home of Dr. Kemp, 419 East Harvard.

Two groups of the Order of Sir Galahad, for boys from 10 to 12 and from 13 to 16 years, have been organized under the supervision of Messrs. Walker, Badger, Tunison and Cate. The work is along lines similar to the Boy Scouts, and the younger boys meet Friday night, the other group Monday nights.

JANUS

was an ancient Roman deity, the god of all beginnings, who took precedence of all other gods. January was named after him. He presided over the beginnings of human life, the day, agricultural life, and over gateways and openings, his two faces looking east and west. Under his archway the Romans marched forth to war, and his gate was always closed in times of peace.

Wes' Burch says everything looks well
As fur as he can see;
We've had a right smart rainy spell,
About as orto be;
But Wes' don't set a heap o' store
By rain that has gone by,

She'll be almighty dry!

Wes' Burch says his potatoes look
First rate this time o' year,
He had some big enough t' cook,
All smooth an' nice an' clear;
But Wes' don't set a heap o' store
On how they look till fall,
An' says if they don't grow no more,
They'll be almighty small!

Wes' Burch says fur as he can see
Th' grain is up t' date;
Although a sight of it'll be
F'r harvest mighty late;
But Wes' don't set no store on grain
A-growin' as it ort,

SUNSET CANYON CLUB TO MEET AGAIN

Saturday's Gathering Too Great for Accommodation of Membership

The meeting of stockholders of the Sunset Canyon club was held Saturday afternoon in the clubhouse, and was a success in point of numbers, about one thousand being present, too many for the transaction of business in so small a place.

An adjournment was taken until next Saturday afternoon, when a meeting at a place large enough to accommodate all of the 3,000 members will be held, the time and place to be announced through the newspapers.

Several hundreds of Glendalians are members of the organization and attended the Saturday meeting.

GIRLS SCRAMBLE FOR JOB

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 16—There is a wild scrable among the girls here for the position of swimming instructress at the Germantown Y. W. C. A. and there's a reason. Since the pool opened four years ago there have been nine instructresses and every one of them has left to be married—naturally the position is mighty popular and all the girls are anxious to get in the "swim."
